The Hidden Enemy

Air pollution isn't just a problem outside. It's a problem inside too. Homes can be up to 7X more polluted than the air outside.

Pollen

Plants and flowers may release microscopic particles into the air.

Air fresheners

Household air fresheners release VOCs and benzene with their fragrance.

Flooring

Some flooring emit formaldehyde, potentially throughout their life.

Material in furniture

Foam that is found in furniture can release harmful formaldehyde gas.

Scented candles

Some scented candles release benzene and formaldehyde into the air as they burn.

Pet dander and disintegrated faces

Cats, dogs and other household pets can spread this microscopic material around the home.

Indoor paints

Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs) may be released as harmful gaseous chemicals from paints.

Outdoor air pollution

Tree pollen, vehicle exhaust fumes and particulate matter enter and get trapped in the home.

Gas hobs and cooking fumes

Fumes and odours, such as Nitrogen Dioxide (NO₂), can be emitted by gas hobs and the cooking process.

Cleaning products

Household cleaning products can contain benzene, fumes and odours.
